The location

The seven and one-half acre Bethlehem Rose Gardens provides a solemn setting for the local tribute to fallen and injured workers. Surrounded by rose bushes, the eight-foot tall Workers' Memorial Day monument is an uplifting symbol for an occasion focused on tragedy. "The bronze sculpture, a worker inside a circle pushing upward, has a universal quality," wrote Allentown Morning Call reporter Ron Devlin before its dedication in 1991. "It's as if the figure were shaping the Earth. Work, an elemental aspect of our being, is defining the world."

The monument

Artists Zenos Frudakis and Benjamin F. Marcune designed the statue. They used Roma Plastina clay to sculpt the 1000-pound figure. Later, the artists encased the workman with rolled-up sleeves in bronze and set him inside a steel circle. The circle symbolizes safety through solidarity and the worker stands inside as if protected.

Bethlehem Steel fabricated the specialty steel circle, known as "Mayari-r Steel." It is a type of weathering steel that is allowed to rust. Years of exposure to the elements created a layer of rust that formed a protective coating on the steel eliminating the need for painting and giving it a distinctive appearance. Meanwhile, the bronze figure retained its green-black patina.

Laran Bronze, Inc., a Chester, Pa. fine art foundry and studio, cast the monument. Union members from the Carpenters #600 and the Operating Engineers #542 installed the 2500-pound memorial.

The monument's dedication on April 28, 1991 marked the first memorial to workplace tragedies in Pennsylvania.

Chronology

February 13, 1990

The Northampton County Labor Council and the Lehigh County Labor Council conceived an idea for a memorial for workers injured or killed due to workplace accidents or diseases. Pete DePietro, president of the Northampton County Labor Council spearheaded the effort. The two labor organizations would later merge to form the Lehigh Valley Labor Council in 2000. Area labor unions and businesses created a memorial committee.

April 28, 1990

Labor activists, friends and family survivors held the first local Workers' Memorial Day ceremony in front of the Van Bittner Steelworkers Building, 53 East Lehigh Street, Bethlehem. This was the originally conceived site of the marker. The Lehigh County Labor Council also held a service at their headquarters at 124 North Sixth Street, Allentown.

September 12, 1990

The Lehigh Valley Workers' Memorial Committee kicked off a fundraising campaign at the Route 512 Holiday Inn, Bethlehem and raised over $125,000 for a memorial. Committee members decided that any money left over would go to a scholarship fund for the children of those who were killed or seriously injured due to a workplace mishap. The committee commissioned artists Frudakis, Glenside, & Marcune, Bethlehem, to design and build a memorial to fallen workers.

December 1990

The City of Bethlehem granted land at the Bethlehem Rose Gardens to erect the memorial.

April 28, 1991

Approximately 350 gathered for the dedication of the Bethlehem Rose Gardens memorial. Over 500 workplace fatalities were read.
